EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM

The Spanish education system is designed to provide comprehensive, balanced, and accessible education for all students. It is structured in several stages, from early childhood education to higher education, and is organized under a legal framework that guarantees educational quality and the right to education for everyone.

The Baccalaureate lasts two years and is divided into three main tracks: Biosciences, Humanities/Social Sciences, and Technology. Within each track, students must choose optional subjects based on their interests and the academic path they wish to pursue, especially if they plan to enter university.

The school year in Spain is divided into three terms, beginning in September and ending in June. There are holiday breaks during summer, Christmas, and Easter.

In addition, the school uses a digital platform called EDUCAMOS, which allows their families to access grades, teacher comments, and other important academic information. To follow the curriculum, students are required to use an iPad (Apple brand), which serves as a learning tool both in class and at home.
